What is the quality of the sensuous and how can it be explored? How can we explore and develop new modes of sensuous teaching and learning? Can we thereby transform the educational system from within? How do we define a curriculum, and how do we evaluate progression if this curriculum is defined by our readiness to explore and absorb sense impressions? How can we define the way the teacher develops as a professional and engages with others in a sensuous teaching environment and in terms of the development of new sensuous modes of knowledge production? How can we define the way the researcher develops methods and theories and engages with others in sensuous knowledge production? How do we collect data on and evaluate the effect, and the affect, of a performance-experiment, and what is the actual transformative impact? How can we give the sensuous an image in flesh and blood? When does this image get an impact? And for whom?

These are some of the questions one could explore as a visiting teacher/researcher/artist at Sisters Academy #4 at Myndlistaskólinn planned in collaboration with The Iceland Academy of Arts.
